James,

After my conversation with Don McGuire - click HERE - last evening in the coffee shop where you work, and as I was about to leave, I noticed you working and we spoke briefly.

You reminded me that I hadn't responded to the email you sent me where you began by saying, "What a joke ... You are the one hiding".

I responded that I had in fact begun my response in my March 3rd email, titled, "Twitter-I was thinking about you"; click HERE.

As you scroll down you would have come across the following verbiage:

Again, be patient which does not mean you should not go back to reread what I wrote about FDR. Click HERE.

The fact that you graduated high school and cannot read, or worse yet you read what you want to read, explains a number of things which I am not responsible for.

It is also okay that you think you must be the most important person in my life right now because I am giving you all this attention.

You should go back right now and read what you wrote me, and you will notice that this point about FDR I have now marked in red; and when you reread what I had previously written you will see that I was referring to FDR dying [4/12/1945] 7 days after writing a most important letter to his friend King Ibn Saud who was no friend of Israel, and that has been proven every day now since the United States Government led the arms boycott of Israel during its War of Independence [Nov. 1947-Jan. 1949] that included making it illegal for men of military age such as my Jewish Allied Fighter-Bomber-Pilot father to enter Israel, and who were being shot on sight and their bodies dumped, without saying Kadish, into the Mediterranean Sea; not to mention, those who are dead, do not set the curriculum at university, and nor do they teach; and this fact of life is something you probably haven't spent all that much time thinking about.

Subject: What a joke...

Gary you did not respond to a single time I said in my last email... You are the one hiding

Here is my email that you conveniently disregarded...

First of all, you have not answered all my questions. I have posed the same central question in both of my emails. What is the importance of this today?

I ask this because you point out obscure events from the past and hype them up as if they explain why the world goes round. I have read the Banker's Manifesto a few times and it means nothing to me because it is only of importance if these men were successful in controlling the wealth of the world, which they have not.

The picture of Ibn Saud is the beginning of US relations with Saudi Arabia is nothing more than a diplomatic meeting where oil was a central issue. Your talk of US puppet regimes is weak because it is not the US does not dictate how oil money is spent. The Saudi royalty wanted consolidation of power and security so they limit oil money to themselves. The US gets more oil from Canada and Mexico but they are certainly not US puppets. The US is concerned with securing their oil interests, Saudi politics is Saudi politics.

FDR died on April 12, NOT 7 days after the meeting with the Ibn Saud and it is documented that his health was very poor before any talks took place. You attempt at connecting the dots for some mass conspiracy continues to falter.

You have a fundamental flaw in your economic theory. All of your points revolve around commodities; oil, gold, diamonds, etc. Wealth is not a zero sum game. Wealth is created. Commodities relative value to the global economy is diminishing. Oil is still of great importance but there is no grand conspiracy around the control of it.

You mentioned that I have left OPEC out of my response about the price of oil. I mentioned OPEC in our discussion when I was busy working and you were attempting to grill me, and now you are attacking me for it. Fair enough, I said it, I'm not complaining. I left it out because, as you should know, cartels work on paper, not in practice. OPEC has very little control over the price of oil because the incentive structure of firms in a cartel run contrary to the goals of the firms (controlling the price of oil). All firms have incentives to cheat and thus OPEC has little influence on the price of oil.

It is nice of you to attack me for disregarding OPEC, but you had nothing to say about my explanation of lower gas prices in the US. I assume you have to keep the ball in your court so that your theories can hold together.

Your claims of human overpopulation, unlimited sums of money the US prints, the US being a lawless society are simply not true.

I would be happy to address any more of your brilliant ideas if they were coherent enough for me to understand since you jump around like an ADHD kid playing hop-scotch.

James

Again, I am going to patiently, methodically and ever so painstakingly take you on one most educational light journey, not that I think for a single moment that you are going to change because you are so heavily invested in thinking yourself smart because you have a university degree and on your way to get another; but you will most definitely change your tune when you find out that the only way you are going to possibly get a better paying job than the one you have, which you know is pretty good given how you currently have no marketable skills that anyone smart is willing to pay you more for, you will have to hide all this knowledge that I am sharing with you, and even then I know you are to going walk away with another wasted degree but with more of a piss poor attitude, which good employers will weed out that much quicker than in the past; no doubt helped by my huge foot print on the Internet.

You also know that I don't need validation from you to know that I have been gifted with logic that has helped gather a great deal of knowledge.

Remember as well, at any time prior to me completing my analysis of what you wrote, you can always jump in and when admitting you are a clown to explain which person in your life is most responsible for feeding you such very poor information.

You should have also chosen a better choice of words than calling me a "joke".

I fully anticipate that even if this is my very last communication I send out, it will serve to enlighten the next generation of children before they allow their formal education to interfere with their learning.

Then again I might survive to see another great sunset, and in the meantime I suggest you line up each one of your Professors to expect to receive an email from me.

Side note to Adam L. Tucker: get me the email addresses of all the business-finance-economics professors at UCSD.
